Newsletter #01/2023

Since this is our first newsletter this year, it is not too late to say: Happy 2023 to all of you in the transdisciplinary research community! This time we invite you to the final edition of our tdAcademy reflection workshops and give you some insights into the results of the previous workshops in the topic lines “Societal Effects”, “Context Dependencies” and “Innovative Formats”. Online you also find the video of the latest webinar, and as always: We warmly invite you to visit our tdCommunity, become a member of the online community and/or update your profile. In the next newsletter we will announce some great news for the German(-speaking) transdisciplinary research community - stay tuned!

Event | 20 April, 2-4pm (CET): Vom Reallabor bis zur künstlerischen Intervention

In this online reflection workshop, the tdAcademy team at the Öko-Institut presents the results of their systematisation approach for innovative formats and transdisciplinary methods with a focus on five relevant TD formats. (Language: German)

REFLECTION ROUND 2
How can we build capacities for context-sensitive td research?

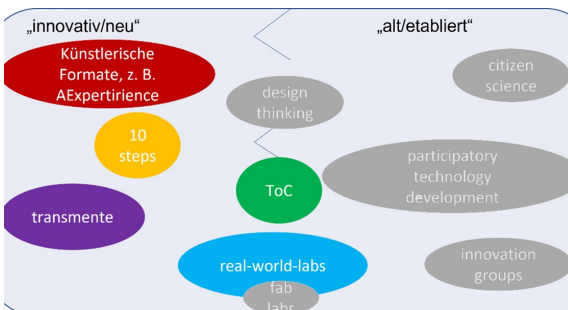

Guiding question:
Thinking about your own experience within TDR: Which skills and capacities were most relevant regarding context-sensitivity?

- need to adapt research to local rules
- need to understand institutional frameworks
- need to understand psychological effects of proposed changes
- distinction between context and process
- inversion, embeddedness into other contexts/institutions
- code of ethics needed

Report | How to build capacities for context-sensitive research

In November 2022, the tdAcademy team at Leuphana University organized an expert workshop as part of topic line 3 to reflect on contextual dependencies in transdisciplinary research. This report summarizes the rich discussion.
