Newsletter #04/2022

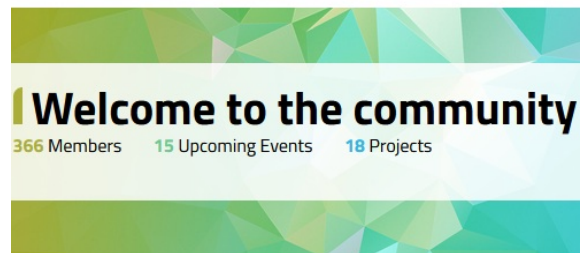

The tdAcademy is back from the summer break with many interesting offers, events and other opportunities to join and meet the transdisciplinary research community. We invite you to apply for a fellowship focussing on the scientific effects of TD research and to tell the community about yourselves - our ITD21 video might convince you to do so. And of course we hope to see you at one of the next events from the tdAcademy team, fellows and cooperation partners!

Research | Scientific Effects: Call for Fellows - Apply now!

The tdAcademy Topic Line 2 at ISOE invites applications for a fellow group to work on the topic of scientific effects of transdisciplinary research, funded by the Robert Bosch Stiftung. Application is possible until 30 September.

Community | Have you already joined and filled your profile?

The tdCommunity as an “interactive address book” works best if you provide some relevant information about your TD work. We made that simple for you by introducing fixed categories to choose from. We're looking forward to read more about you!

Ulli Vilsmaier & Dena Fam (2022): The Responsive and Constitutive Character of Transdisciplinarity: Consequences for Higher Education

This publication was produced by Dena Fam (UTS, Australia) and Ulli Vilsmaier (Responsive Research Collective, Switzerland) as part of the tdAcademy fellowship on the transformation of universities towards dynamic and relational inter- and transdisciplinary institutions. The paper outline challenges and opportunities in implementing transdisciplinarity in higher education that emerge from its dual role as both responsive and constitutive. It proposes various measures to create enabling environments for transdisciplinary education at universities.
